to the Department of Environmental Protection:

As an 8th generation Mainer, I am writing in opposition to the proposed NordicAquaFarms project in Belfast. Of the many reasons to oppose this environmental assault, I put dredging up buried mercury at the top of the list. Mercury enters the food chain and concentrates in body fat as it moves up to larger creatures like fish and humans. It is an extreme neurotoxin, especially dangerous for children, and there is already far too much of it in fish found in Maine. It would be a grave error on the part of the DEP to put the public health at risk to enrich a multi-national corporation.

Respectfully submitted,
