The idea of putting so called climate change ahead of the economy of our state is one of the most ridiculous ideas I ever heard outside of California. Think it's working great out there? They are currently dealing with a mass exodus out of their state, and they're backing off on their diesel emissions ever so slightly. Turns out. If you operate a DOF compatible truck with ground exhaust, the def Kaiden exhaust gas is killing vegetation on the side of the road. They had a massive economy there that can handle unelected bureaucrats doing dumb stuff, we do not! How about you people stay in your lane and take care of what's already on the books instead of dreaming up new ways to make our lives miserable. This passes and goes into effect and I'll be the first one to put the house on fire market, move my family and my business right the hell outta here.
